			Cardholder Agreement for more information. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li> Why It's Critical To Know Your Gift Card Balance            If you wish to use your Gift Card to purchase an item for more than the Available Funds, many national merchants – but not all – will accept your gift card and automatically offer you the opportunity use another form of payment to pay the balance of the final purchase price. This is called a "split tender" transaction because you would be splitting the final transaction amount between your Gift Card and another form of payment.         </li> <li> If you're not sure of the merchant's policy regarding a "split tender" transaction, it's critical to know the exact balance of your American Express Gift Card. You can check the amount of funds available on your Gift Card by visiting www.americanexpress.com/giftcard or calling American Express toll free within the United States at 1-877-AXP-GIFT, which is the telephone number printed on the back of your Gift Card. Once you know your balance, you MUST ask the Merchant if two forms of payment will be accepted for the purchase you wish to make. If the Merchant agrees, first request that the Merchant place a specific dollar amount on the other form of payment (e.g., the final transaction amount less the balance of funds available on your Gift Card), and then use your Gift Card to pay the remaining balance. Some retailers, particularly department stores, will only allow a "split tender" transaction if the second form of payment is cash or check. Internet and most mail order merchants do not permit "split tender" transactions. We do not guarantee that the Merchant will accept two forms of payment, such as two gift cards.         </li> </ul>
